

Virtue—al Reality

Scenario 1: A mall on a Friday night A group of friends is going to the mall to shop, hang out, eat, talk, and flirt. One friend wants a leather jacket that is on display in a new shop. Another person wants to share some gossip about two people at school. Another is anticipating seeing a certain cute student at the mall. What moral dilemmas might arise in this scenario?

Scenario 2: A party with high school students from the area A group of friends is going to a party to talk, laugh, hang out, flirt, and have fun. This week the party is at the home of a new kid whose parents are away and who, you heard, have a well-stocked liquor cabinet. You also heard rumors that a couple of the kids who'll be there like to experiment with drugs. What moral dilemmas might arise in this scenario?

Scenario 3: A school sporting event A group of friends is going to a school sporting event to enjoy the game, cheer for their team, and socialize with other kids from school. The opposing team is the school rival, and a big fight occurred the last time the two schools played each other. Also, there's talk of a prank being played on some of the rival team members. What moral dilemmas might arise in this scenario?

Scenario 4: A night at the movies A group of friends is going to see the latest sci-fi film at the local cinema. Following the movie, everyone will go to the house of one of the girls in the group whose parents are gone for the evening. While at the house, one friend shares that he has some pills that he took from his parents' medicine cabinet for the group to share. What moral dilemmas might arise in this scenario?

