

Work Values

Because of your personality, interests, life goals, and so on, you are probably looking for particular features in an occupation. These are your work values—for example, creative opportunities, a nine-to-five work schedule, independence, a big salary, flexible hours, or freedom to leave the job behind after work hours are over.

1. In the space below, list as many of your work values as you can think of.

2. In the column “Occupation” below, list some occupations that are attractive to you. Be bold! Do not list only the job that you think you will end up doing. Let your imagination run free. What jobs would you really like to have? Leave room between each occupation.

3. Then, in the column “Work Values Present,” note which of your work values are probably present in each occupation. In the column “Work Values Missing,” note which of your work values are probably missing from each occupation.
