

Determining the Elements of Human Acts

Situation A (Pride) A student lies about school achievements, community service, and leadership roles on a scholarship application for college in order to have a better chance of being accepted by the college.	Situation B (Pride) A student exaggerates the significance of her performance on a sports team in order to win admiration and new friends.
Situation C (Anger) A student posts unflattering remarks about another student on a social networking site because the other student embarrassed her in front of friends.	Situation D (Anger) A student speaks disrespectfully to his parents when asked to finish mowing the lawn because it interrupts his plans for going out.
Situation E (Sloth) A student misses Mass on a regular basis because he wants to sleep in on Sundays.	Situation F (Sloth) A student neglects to complete a homework assignment during the week because he would rather play video games.

